Contributed by Administrator

Razz poker is simple to learn; however, you might or might not spend a life time learning it based on the kind of passion you have towards playing the game. If you have that kind of deadliest Razz poker passion you will master it very soon, if you do not have the kind of attitude to master the game, then you might land up making the same old careless mistakes and not improving at all.

Razz poker is all about strategy. Using the right kind of strategy is what makes Razz poker interesting. Even in cases where you do not have a basis to be making your decision on whether you should call, raise or fold in a given situation the right kind of strategy will provide with a kind of control over your destiny in the poker table.

Strategy is almost focused to achieving an objective of a particular kind. In Razz poker the object like in any other form of poker is to make the winning money. The goal of a good strategy will not be to winning pots; rather it is to make a balanced winning. If your target is going to be to make multiple winnings, you might do it by playing almost all the hands that you are dealt with, but at the end you would have made a lot of winnings and even more losing. Ultimately you are at loss. A good strategy makes more winnings and prevents most of the loss.

It is really impossible to win every pot without losing your money so you need to be very selective about choosing your Razz poker hands so that you land up winning more and losing less. Playing with 3 favorite low cards that qualify for a Razz poker hand split will be the best way to go. If you do not see them by the third street chances are going to be very low for winning unless there is not anyone with the best low in their hand and you are smart in making others believe that you are the best.

Anyone can win in Razz poker, but when it comes to long term winning the cards and the luck element are those that will even out and the better player is the one that will win consistently. Ultimately, never stick on to playing just one variant of online poker . Play the variant that you are good at more often and keep in touch with other games too.
